Health for Everyone

Taking into account that human life is precious, the Turkish Health Policy is based on the principle of “Health for Everyone”. Serious steps are taken in our country considering protection, improvement and rehabilitation of health on this principle. Currently various protective health services such as immunization, monitoring maternal and child health, alimentation as well as controls on smoking and obesity are provided with success. Additionally, developing technologies help improvements on diagnosis and therapy periods in our hospitals, as well as increase the level of satisfaction on nursing by well-educated, expert and qualified healthcare personnel.

“Health for Everyone” is a universal principle embracing all human beings without paying attention to language, religion, nationality and gender differences. Each and every health planner and operator, knowing the sacredness of right to live, serves within this principle. Therefore every individual is able to get this service from everywhere he or she desires, for the sake of improvement and rehabilitation of health.

Rapid development in communication technology enables us to reach information from all over the world. It is possible for all to receive all kind of information about Turkish Health Services anytime over The Ministry of Health or over the Communication Centers of our hospitals.

Health, no doubt, is one of the reasons for international tourism. The demand for quality health services, which are provided in our country at high and well applied standards, makes Turkey one of the most demanded destinations in health tourism. Especially in Antalya, which is also very popular by its high tourism potential, medical tourism is not only provided in varieties but also is developing by sufficient bed capacity, qualified staff and the existence of various health institutions and establishments.

Our target is to create a trade mark out of Antalya in medical tourism by reaching humane and technical standards in infrastructure, in medical technologies, in international common treatment protocols, in sufficient communication technologies and in qualified personnel.

History

An ancient legend tells about the founding of Antalya: One day Attalos II summoned his servant and dispersed them on the four winds, saying, "Go and find me a place so beautiful that all the kings and rulers will covet it; go and find me the paradise on earth" For months, the soldiers travelled to lands far and wide, and though they encountered many beautiful places, they could not find a place whose heavenly beauty could satisfy their king. That is, until they arrived in the lands where today's Antalya is... Confronted with natural beauty is such abundance, they were convinced that it was the paradise that their king has described. They returned to Pergamum expeditiously to tell their king that they had found the paradise. Afterwards, Attalos naturally wanted to see the area for himself and allowed his soldiers on a journey to the shores of the Mediterranean. Finally, they reached shore where the lushly forested foothills of the Taurus Mountains met the turquoise waters of the Mediterranean. The king, seeing the fine yellow sand of the beaches blend with the blue of the sky and the deeper blue of the sea that reflected the green of the virgin forests was instantly spellbound. He immediately ordered that a city be built there, as he was convinced that it was the most beautiful spot in the World. In his honour the city built was named "Attaleia" (city/home of Attalos).

Ancient city of Perge

Ancient city of Perge is situated within the boundaries of Aksu, a town 17 kilometres east of the Antalya city centre. The city believed to be in existence during the Hittite Period and known as "Parha" became one of the most orderly cities of Anatolia during the Roman Period. The city became famous for its architecture and marble sculpting, and the statues unearthed during the excavations of the ancient city have rendered the Antalya Museum one of the most important collections of its type in the World.

The basis of the city plan of Perge is two main roads, one extending in an east-west direction, and the other in a north-south direction. The 15,000-seat theatre is quite well preserved.

The two storey elaborately decorated stage building across the cavea was built during the 2nd century AD. The artefacts found there are today on permanent display at the "Hall of Perge Theatre" in the Antalya Museum. The excellence of those sculptures reflects the unique style of the Perge school of sculpting.

Another principal structure of the ancient city of Perge is the stadium which was built in the 2nd century BC to the North of the theatre, and the spectators section has a capacity of about 12,000 seats. Other social and cultural buildings reflecting the majesty of the city in Antiquity are the rectangular planned agora, high towers, monumental fountains, bathhouses and column lined streets.

Hadrian's Gate

One of the best-preserved historic structures in Antalya, the gate was built in 130 AD in honour of the Roman Emperor Hadrian. As the city walls eventually enclosed the outer part of the gate, the entrance was left unused for many years, which is why it remains erect. There are three round arched opening for entry in the two storey structure. It is made of white marble except for columns, and decorated with reliefs and engravings. On either side of the gate stand two towers. The southern Julia Sancta Tower was built of plain, block Stones during the reign of Hadrian. The lower portions of the northern tower date to Antiquity while the upper portion was constructed during the Seljuk Period.

With the modern city on one side and the old city of Antalya on the other, Hadrian's Gate fortified with its towers is literally a porthole into the city's past. Standing before this gate, a symbol of harmony and the intermingling of artefacts from the civilizations existed one after the other through the ages, you can gaze around and imagine yourself on a journey back in time.

Department of General Surgery

Morbid Obesity and Surgical Treatment

The only effective method for the long term treatment of morbid obesity, whose cause hasn't been completely revealed yet, is surgery in addition to therapeutic approaches such as low calorie diets, medicines, behavioural changes and exercise treatment. The operations that are performed in our department on morbid obesity are as follows: vertical belt gastrectomy, gastric banding (adjustable and non-adjustable), sleeve Gastrectomy (tube stomach), Roux-en-Y- gastric bypass and malabsorption procedures (biliopancreatic diversion, duodenal switch). All of these techniques can be applied by laparoscopic approach. In case of laparoscopic gastric belt, on the other hand, 1 cm belt or stripe is placed on the highest part of the stomach. In this way, a small sack is formed and a stable outlet is provided to the lower stomach. The outlet leading to the stomach is narrowed down with the adjustable belt that was approved by FDA in June 2001 and thus the food is restricted from leaving the sack. In sleeve Gastrectomy (tube stomach) operation, 2/3 of the stomach is deactivated and resected from the body. Consequently, this is an unrecoverable operation since a certain part of the stomach is resected. From then on, the patient has to sustain his/her life with a stomach of 80-100 milliliter volume. In case of gastric bypass procedure, stomach is divided and small gastric sack is formed. The new gastric sack is connected to small intestine in Y shape in varying lengths. Malabsorption operations help losing weight by reducing the absorption of calorie from intestines. In such operations, stomach size is reduced and majority of intestines are bypassed. The selection among the surgical operative procedures will depend on the body mass index of the patient, coexisting diseases (COPD, Heart Failure, Diabetics), preference of the surgeon and dietary habits of the patient.

The museums of Antalya, Side, Alanya, Elmalı, Isparta and Burdur showcase how intertwined the tribes and cultures were with the arts throughout the centuries.

Visitors should definitely take their time in these museums which are all arranged according to the latest trends in museum planning and elegantly display the region's past. The Antalya Archaeological Museum received the European Union Prize for Cultural Heritage / Europa Nostra Award in 1988.

Aspendos Theatre

The Aspendos Theatre, praised by the famous travellers cited above, amongst others, in one of the most magnificent and well- preserved buildings in the World, and it is the best surviving example of the theatre built by the Romans in Asia and Africa. According to its inscription, it was built during the reign of Roman Emperor Marcus Aurelius (161-180) by the architect Zeno, son of Theodoros. The scene building, stone paved orchestra, and the cavea with a seating capacity of approximately 15-20,000 spectators are the main components of the theatre. The top of cavea was lined with an arched portico. The building is one of the pinnacles of ancient architecture, and it has an excellent plan and superb acoustics. The building has an introverted appearance, an even the slightest tune touched in the orchestra can be heard loud and clear in every part of the cavea, even in the upper galleries. That feature found its way into the legend of the building of the theatre:

Once upon a time the king of the region decided to give his daughter as a bride to the citizen who had done the most beneficial deed for his country. Many asked for the princess' hand in marriage, but only two of them passed the discerning criteria of the king. One of them had built an aqueduct that brought water to the city from far away, and the other had built a magnificent theatre for his city. The king first thought to give his daughter's hand to the man who had built the aqueducts. However, his daughter who most probably fell in love with the other man, asked his father to visit the theatre once more before making up his mind. Father and daughter went together to the theatre, and climbed to the upper gallery. At the same time the architect was pacing the orchestra, oblivious to the presence, hands clasped behind his back and head bowed, while murmuring to himself, " The daughter of the king must be mine". Despite his very low voice his words were clearly heard by the king, who was so impressed by the fantastic acoustics of the theatre that he gave the hand of his daughter to the architect. The couple's marriage ceremony was also held in theatre.

At present the theatre is the venue of the annual "Aspendos International Opera and Ballet Festival". There is not much more that can be said about the Aspendos Theatre. It is a magnificent building unlike anything you have seen before.
